

Slide 1

Slide notes: Here we see a posted Journal. In this case, the Journal was captured and then posted.

Slide 2

Slide notes: We can also see that this Journal was posted in the Financial Period for September 2009. Any Journal can be captured month after month, and the same details posted each time in the next month.

Slide 3

Slide notes: When a Journal is expected to happen again in the next month, and the month after that, again and again, then we say that the Journal recurs. In that case, we can define it as a Recurring Journal, and if we do so, then the system will automatically post it every month as a Recurring Journal, without it having to be captured again and again. That is what a Recurring Journal is.
